

Since the beginning of the SARS-CoV-2 pandemic, there has been an increasing number of patients with persistent organ damage and disorders. Even a mild form of the disease does not guarantee that everything is back to normal after a few weeks. Therefore, even in the case of an asymptomatic course, it is recommended to be examined by a specialist physician after a certain period of time.

We want to give our patients some security by examining their condition and focusing on the most common symptoms.
